

Best Date Ever

David and Amy were ordinary sixteen years old teenagers and very much in love with each other like any couples were. David liked Amy for her simplicity and friendliness and Amy liked him for his good looks and sense of humour. They would always joke around with each other. They had been friends before they started dating eventually, a few weeks before.

David wanted to do something special for Amy and spent more time with her. So, he asked her on Thursday afternoon, “Amy, would you like to go to the cinema with me on Saturday?” Amy, who was blushing, replied, “I’d love to.” “Cool! Be ready before four o’clock, the movie starts at 5:45 and will end in three hours,” he said. “Did you say three hours? Um... don’t you think that’s too long,” she asked being worried. However, he just smiled at her.

Amy was nervous because it was her first date with David and she got no idea what to wear but one thing was clear. She wanted David to be impressed with her looks. So, on Friday after school she went shopping alone. She wanted to look trendy and bought the latest outfits. After that she went to Lee’s hair salon, which was popular for making people’s hair stylish. After four hours of shopping, she was exhausted and finally headed home. Amy couldn’t wait for her date, she was really excited. It was eleven at night and still she hadn’t slept yet. She was both exhausted and excited but exhausted but soon was snoring in no time.

It was three o’clock in the afternoon; David wanted to look good but in a simple way. He walked to his closet and checked. He saw his favorite sky-blue T-shirt and light sand-brown pants. He dressed and styled his hair. He pulled out his white converse shoes and checked himself in the mirror one last time and was proud of himself. He looked like a modern fairy tale prince since he was tall and handsome.

He reached Amy’s house and waited patiently for her. Then after a few minutes, he heard Amy’s mum saying, “Have a nice time Amy, don’t be late home.” “Ok, bye mum,” she replied. Just then David’s mobile rang but he heard the door close. When he finished talking to his friend and turned around, he couldn’t believe his eyes. There, standing in front of him, was a young girl who was fashionably dressed and she was smiling at him. He couldn’t believe his eyes. The girl said, “Hi!” And she kissed him on his cheek. He was too stunned to speak and thousand things were running inside his head, but worried that Amy might see them. Finally, he found her voice and asked, “Who are you?” the girl looked hurt. “It’s me, Amy, of course,” she replied. He looked at her and was nearly speechless. “You look um...different,” he said. She said, “ Do I look good and how about my hair cut?” He shook himself as if he were in a dream but she was still there looking quite angry. “Amy, what happened to you? Did you bang your head?” he asked. “Stop looking at me like that, I ‘m not crazy,” she scolded. “Amy, we’re going to the cinema not some fancy fashion show,” he said.

Amy felt hurt and began to cry. He hugged her and said softly, “You don’t have to change for me. You are beautiful just the way you are.” She managed to say, “I was just trying to be your type, you know.” “But Amy, you are already my type, be yourself,” he said. She told him to wait for her and ran inside her house and came back after a few minutes. Now she was simple and beautiful with a simple dress and shoes instead of fancy clothes and tall boots. She ran to him and said, “Well, my hair will grow soon.” She looked at her watch and said, “We’ve got only half an hour before the movie starts!” They ran together laughing and hugging and it was the best date ever for them.