

A Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I would like to share my opinions about using mobile phones during the lessons school. Firstly, I am against this because if all the students use mobile phones in classrooms during lessons, then no one will pay attention to the teachers.

Secondly, students will not study. They will not pay attention if they use mobile phones in school.

Thirdly, students can use their mobile phones when they are out of school. phone in school is not important. If you want to talk to your friends on phone during lessons then I think that you can stay home and do this.

In my opinion, if students really want to bring their mobile phones to school then the phones should be switched off during lessons. These are so many disadvantages of using mobile phones in schools for students.

If the students will be allowed to use phone in classes, this will affect their study because the students will not listen to the teachers and they will fail in their exams.

I think that students should pay their attention to study matter than mobile because mobile phones can also be used at home or at some other places. However, school is the only place for study. If every student in school spends lots of time using their phones, they will not be able to learn anything and waste their time.

Finally, I would just like to say that bringing mobile phones in schools should be allowed and if it is allowed them to bring their own mobile phones, they should be switched off.

Yours faithfully,

Chris Wong
